

INTRODUCTION

New millennium has ushered in divergent challenges to the Humankind. No country is an island and no value system is universally applicable. A big hiatus between hemispheres, and the continents, coupled with population explosion across the poorer countries of the World has created a gulf between the resources and the needs. Therefore scientists, thinkers, philosophers have not been able to prescribe an universal value system to solve human problems. The conflict of interests between haves and have-nots, rich and poor, humans and the nature has resulted in perennial upheavals. Intellectuals, governments and the trans-national organisations and UN bodies are exploring various strands of thoughts to find appropriate policies to solve the ills of new millennium.

Social philosophers are seriously examining the new philosophical positions to establish harmony between millennial challenges and the contemporary values with an accent on universal, ethical perspectives. It is in this context the forthcoming International Conference on the theme "Social Philosophy and Yoga for new millennium" will address millennial issues from socio-philosophical thought process. Yogic science which is an important contribution of India is found to be an appropriate technology for various problems confronting challenges of new millennium.
